What's changing, what isn't, and what still matters is the title of this workshop and sums it all up.

Fair Housing has become a moving target in 2026. Federal enforcement priorities are changing, longstanding guidance has been withdrawn or reconsidered, and significant regulatory changes have been proposed—leaving housing professionals wondering which rules have actually changed, which may change, and which remain firmly in place.

This four hour workshop cuts through the uncertainty. It will address critical compliance issues that continue to create risk on site including reasonable accommodations and modifications, assistance animals, applicant screening and criminal history, disability—related conditions, occupancy policies, resident and staff interactions, and other situations where routine decisions can become Fair Housing problems.
